Tour Book 1990:

Since the cornerstone was laid in 1884, this High Victorian Gothic landmark has stood at the crossroads of Main, West Main, and South Main as "a sermon in itself." After members of the Wilson Street church left to form Main Street United Methodist Church, Mt. Vernon's parent church was completed on Lynn Street in 1872. About a decade later, church members decided that their future growth would be enhanced by leaving the business area of the city and moving to the fashionable area on the western end of Danville. Built by local contractor, T. B. Fitzgerald, the site was purchased from Mr. and Mrs. John Pace in 1884.

The name of the new church originated from Washington's home on the Potomac and from Mount Vernon Place Church in Baltimore, which was the home church of A. L. Carson, the architect who designed this monument at a finished cost of $33,000. Maj. William Sutherlin was prominently associated with the church's history.

The handsome massing of geometric shapes, the four-story square tower, and the priceless stained-glass windows all contribute to the architectural significance of the structure for its congregation and the community.

Tour Book 2009:

Lavish Tudor Revival-style -- post-World War I -- and other distinct design features relate this house to ones nearby on West Main and Lady Astor Streets, and in Forest Hills, all from the Roaring '20s and local architect J. Bryant Heard.

A product of the golden age of 1920s revivals -- Spanish, Mediterranean, Dutch Colonial, American Colonial, to name just a few -- this English Cottage or Tudor Revival house was completed 1922-23 for one of the area's most enterprising families, Mr. and Mrs. James I. Pritchett, Jr. Descended from a family with roots deep in Virginia's Pittsylvania and Halifax counties, James I. Pritchett, Jr., operated with his father a wholesale grocery and building supply firm, James I. Pritchett and Son. Another family enterprise, Dan Valley Mills, operated from 1894 until the early 1960s. Until subsequent owners demolished it just four years ago, the last remnant of the Dan Valley complex -- a four-story brick flour mill -- anchored the north corner of the Main Street (now Martin Luther King) Bridge at Route 58.

In fact, for some years, both generations named James I. Pritchett, father and son, lived only two blocks apart. The father's residence, the old Pritchett homeplace, stood at 992 Main Street until the mid-1950s when it was razed, along with the Dibrell mansion at 990, for construction of the Doctors Building.

Apparently, when the younger Pritchetts first called 108 West Main Street home, it was an earlier, wood-framed dwelling purchased from Mr. and Mrs. A.W. Traylor about 1910. A dozen years later, the Pritchetts had that house razed in favor of its more stylish successor.

Following its 40-year occupancy by James I. Pritchett, Jr., and his family, the house at 108 West Main served as annex-dormitories for Stratford College until the school closed in 1974. Thereafter, the first floor housed the medical offices of Dr. Lurton Arey, followed by those of Dr. Randy Buckspan. These handsome rooms also have housed an accountant and an arts organization.

Today, the Danville Yoga and Meditation Center has found a home in the historic Pritchett House, the property since 2004 of Cristina and James Thomas. The Center's ten-person staff cultivates serenity of mind, body and spirit in this historic setting of spacious rooms with Tudor-Revival-style fixtures that echo its charming exterior.

Tour Book 2013:

In 1913, brothers Charles and Peter Booth began construction on their two nearly-identical dwellings of Mt. Airy, NC, granite -- each Foursquare with center-hall plan -- at 243 and 247 West Main Street. Just north, the Booths built a third such granite house at 233 West Main -- one with a footprint slightly slimmer than its larger cousins. All three were completed in 1914 in a city of brick and wood, where stone construction remains rare.

The first occupants known to have lived at 233 were members of the W.T. Hughes family; they were residing here in 1915 and purchased the house two years later. However, deed and land records suggest that the house may have been home, briefly, to Dr. and Mrs. Tom Edmunds. Dr. Edmunds was founder and long the administrator of Community Hospital, whose site nearby was erased long ago by the Route 86 interchange.

William T. Hughes along with his brother John E. Hughes, was a scion of one of the city's first families of tobacco -- including the John E. Hughes Co., and Hughes Warehouse, among other lucrative enterprises. Hailing from Pittsylvania County, he came to Danville in 1881. A veteran of the Spanish-American War, Col. W. T. Hughes also advanced the tobacco interests and family fortunes in Louisburg, North Carolina, and Chase City, Virginia, where he operated the Mecklenburg Mineral Springs and the Virginia-Carolina Fox Hunting Association. In that county too, he at one time owned Prestwoud, the serene 18th-century Georgian mansion of the Skipwith family.

Colonel Hughes died in 1928; his widow, the former Clara Davis of Norfolk, Virginia, continued to reside here until 1940 when the family moved next door to 229-31 West Main (which they also owned already) and sold their house at 233 to George and Odille Davis. George W. Davis founded the business, Davis Storage and Warehouse, Inc., still operated today in Danville's Tobacco District by his grandson and namesake.

Following Mrs. Davis' death in 1981, her estate conveyed the house to Rufus and Bessie Reynolds. Here the couple, who operated Reynolds Furniture downtown, lived for almost 30 years.

Since 2010, under the watch of Roberto and Gloria Lomas, the house has been lovingly refurbished by these transplants from Winston-Salem (NC). Gradually renewing its handsome rooms, they have returned luster to well-proportioned spaces contained within fortress-like granite walls. No strangers to historic preservation, these hands-on restorers own two other houses in Danville's Old West End.

Holiday Tour 1999:

Sheathed in mellow brown cedar shakes, this charming "bungalow," with Craftsman and Colonial Revival trim, dates from the First World War when it was built for Mr. and Mrs. T. Jefferson Rison on a portion of "Ficklen's Field." A narrow porte cochere on the left reflects perhaps Mr. Rison's enthusiasm for the automobile. Along with Charles K. Carter, his partner at the Dan Valley Motor Company, Mr. Rison was recognized as one of Danville's first car dealers. His grandfather, Col. William Rison, a clerk of Danville corporation court for more than a quarter century, lived in the old mansion on Holbrook Avenue, which was razed about 1909 to construct a school, Rison Park, that later became the first George Washington High School.

Mr. T. Jefferson Rison and his wife, the former Amelia Swift of Memphis, Tennessee, apparently lived at their new home at 234 West Main Street for only a couple of years at most. They then relocated to Mississippi where, from about 1919 to 1930, Mr. Rison ran a large agricultural operation growing cotton and other farm products.

After the couple left Danville, their house was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lee Walton. Director for the Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association, Mr. Walton, his wife, the former Mamie Irby, and their family lived on West Main throughout the 1920s. In 1931 the house was sold to Catherine H. Bass who lived here with her husband, Mr. T. Jefferson Bass, a well-known life insurance agent, until just prior to his death in 1949.

For the next decade, the property was home to Dr. and Mrs. Prentice Kinzer, Jr., their son and daughter. After 1959, and the death of Dr. Kinzer, a widely known orthopedic surgeon, his widow continued to live here until 1967, about the time of her remarriage. The house was purchased next by Sue Brown Harrison, widow of Wayles R. Harrison, longtime president of American National Bank, and memorialized in a charitable fund that bears his name. Mrs. Harrison lived in her West Main Street home until 1980, when it was sold to Mr. and Mrs. William Watts. Mrs. Watts conveyed the property to Patricia P. Maurakis in 1991.

Three and a half years ago, Mrs. Maurakis sold the house to its present owner, Anne M. Banks. Since then, Mrs. Banks has refurbished the dwelling, transforming its spacious interior with her expert eye -- not only for comfort, but also decorator style.

Tour Book 2004:

The entrepreneurship of two brothers, Charles and Peter Booth -- a banker and a hardware store owner, respectively -- gave form and substance to this solid brick foursquare house inspired by the popular Prairie and Georgian Revival styles. Riding the crest of the wave as Danville's West End developed into the city's first streetcar suburb, the Booths purchased four vacant lots situated between two late-Victorian homes. Following two years construction on their own massive homes -- a pair built of solid Mt. Airy (NC) granite -- the brothers opted for brick construction on this speculative dwelling next door.

On the eve of the First World War, it became home to Mr. James R. Muse and his wife, the former Nellie Walker. During some 20 years on West Main, Mr. Muse worked principally as a traveling salesman with a local dry goods firm. Here, in their comfortable West Main dwelling, the Muses raised several children.

In 1937, Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Grogan purchased the property where they lived for nearly half a century. Mr. Grogan worked for Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, later Esso (now Exxon-Mobil). That business tradition continued when the Grogan's son Frank, Jr., began Grogan Oil Company, a well-regarded local business. It was in the hands of Frank and Eva Grogan that this house also became known, locally and far afield, as the Grogan Tourist Home, beginning just after World War II, when lodgings for traveling salesmen came into demand.

Following the Grogans' stewardship, which ended in the mid-1980s, the house went into a precipitous decline. A series of owners used the house first as an insurance office and then a boarding house, further compromising its original floor plan.

Happily in 2001, current owners Dr. Sorina-Simion Rodgers and Stephen Rodgers, armed with vision and determination, turned what had become an "ugly duckling" back into a beautiful swan. They set about "unmuddling" the floor plan, creating a truly spectacular period kitchen, and enlarged master suite, complete with all-new infrastructure and curb appeal.

Although a recent career move to Idaho wrenched the couple away most reluctantly from their three-year dream project, they are proud of their restoration legacy here. If these walls could talk, one can only imagine the stories of overnight regulars at Grogan's Tourist Home, a precursor to today's bed and breakfast inns.

Tour Book 2003:

Buff-colored brick accented with terra-cotta-colored mortar joints distinguishes this elegant house built in 1921 for the tobacconist William Y. Noell and his wife. With Eugene D. Noell, Mr. Noell operated the leaf tobacco firm W.Y. Noell & Son on Lynn Street at Loyal -- remodelled in 1917 from William Sutherlin's antebellum tobacco factory which was pressed into service as prison No.6 for Union captives during the Civil War.

Members of the Noell family moved to West Main Street from 1021 Main Street, the present home of Hope Harbor. Here they purchased lot No.2, part of the old "Ficklen Place," which was developing during the 1920s along the north side of the West Main's 200 block, as well as on Lady Astor Street and Westmoreland Court. Many of these substantial houses like this one were architectural products of J. Bryant Heard, whose handsome designs still grace adjacent blocks.

With its arched porch bays and green-clay pantile roof, the house is a satisfying blend of Mediterranean-inspired design and quiet Georgian symmetry. In 1934, during the depths of the Depression, Mrs. Noell -- long a widow -- sold the property to Dr. and Mrs. James W. Tipton. A well-known EENT specialist, Dr. Tipton lived here over 20 years. For about a decade after that, the house sheltered the family of James L. Carter, an executive with the leaf dealer, Dibrell Brothers.

During most of the 1970s and 1980s, the house was the residence of a succession of educators and their families. Three of these individuals -- R. Kirby Godsey, Timothy C. Brown, and John P. Dever -- were affiliated with nearby Averett (University).

From the 1990s until a year ago, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Reynolds made the house at 240 West Main their home. Like previous owner James L. Carter, Mr. Reynolds was an executive with Dibrell Brothers (DIMON, Inc.).

Since acquiring the property a year ago, Dr. and Mrs. W. William Wentz, Jr. are delighted to be part of the reclamation of the western leg of the Old West End Historic District. The interior of their Heard-designed home is a model of Georgian Revival detail, set off by the couple's restrained decoration which combines contemporary comfort with traditional style.

Tour Book 1997:

In its eighty-year history, only two families ever have owned this serene, Georgian Revival style brick dwelling of deep red brick with a stately porch of Tuscan columns and a terra-cotta tiled roof. Designed by the popular local architect J. Bryant Heard, and built in 1916 judging from the June 29 issue of Manufacturers Record for that year, the imposing structure originally was home to the Julian Meade family. After years of service as a single-family dwelling, the house was converted by the Meades into a duplex, with a unit on each floor, but since 1993 loving new owners have reunited the floor plan within its spacious Foursquare frame, bringing the house full circle to its elegant origins.

Until the death of its last resident Edwin B. Meade, the house had remained home to members of the Meade family for more than 75 years. Following the pattern set by his forebears, Mr. Meade early became a partner in the law firm of Meade and Meade, where he practiced alongside his father, Mr. Julian Meade -- for whom the house at 244 West Main Street house was built. He, in turn, had followed in the professional footsteps of his father-in-law, Capt. E.E. Bouldin.

Until his retirement last year, Mr. Frank O. Meade, grandson of the builder of this house and son of its last family resident, continued this family tradition in the legal practice. Although not originally in the market for a house when they went to see the old Meade place, the Echols were captivated with its possibilities. During their ambitious renovation they reunited its well-proportioned rooms -- removing a partition in front of the staircase, recreating the balustrade, and in the process returning upstairs and down to an open floor plan adapted from the original. All the while they were careful to retain the existing original chandeliers and sconces.

The Echols' handsome furnishings, including family-owned English antiques, set off the well-proportioned formal rooms with their Neo-Classical Revival details such as heavy crown moldings, reeded casings, and imposing mantels -- each different -- of Greek Revival inspiration. The owners have had these firebox surrounds marbleized employing the faux painting talents of Phil Ramsey, a Halifax, Virginia artist, whose artistry also transformed the blind concrete infill of a former exterior passage into a trompe l'oeil pair of French doors which appear to function and keep at bay a family dog. Throughout the house are charming reminders, in documents, needlework, and other memorabilia, of earlier generations of the owners' families.

Coincidentally, Mrs. Echols has a circuitous tie to the family of the former mistress of this house, Bessie Bouldin (Mrs. Julian) Meade. In 1880, Mrs. Meade's father, Capt. Edwin E. Bouldin, sold part of his Holbrook Avenue residence lot for the old Colonel Carrington home at 622 Holbrook Avenue, a handsome Italianate-style landmark built for Col. A.B. Carrington -- whose stature as a tobacconist helped expand the fortunes of Dibrell Brothers, now DIMON Inc. Mrs. Echols is Colonel Carrington's great-granddaughter.

Tour Book 1983:

In 1914, four Italians pitched tents on West Main Street and began constructing two houses of granite imported from a mountain top in north-western North Carolina. The work was commissioned by two brothers, Charles and Peter Booth. Today, Peter's house is the gracious home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Callahan.

In recent years, publications such as the Old House Journal have dubbed the commodious rectangular-lined houses such as the Callahan's as 'American Foursquares.' As such, this dwelling and its neighbor, are typical of the less-decorated early 20th century houses of the period; they are atypical, at least in Danville, as structures built of solid stone, a material rarely used in this area.

These stones were brought to Danville by railway and hauled from the train to the building site by horse and wagon. It is interesting to note that in the Callahan house and its near-twin next door, no two stones -- all of which were hand-hewn -- are alike. As the houses were being built, the Italian workmen erected a framework of wood, the stones were set in place and then the framework was removed. The massive structure, which took two years to complete, has exterior walls which are two feet thick. Inside, the woodwork is beautifully finished birch.

Peter Booth sold the house to Mr. J.M. Thomas and his wife Florence. About 27 years ago Mr. Jackson Fowlkes, Mrs. Callahan's late husband, purchased it from the Thomas estate. Since his death, and Mrs. Fowlkes' marriage to Edwin Callahan, Mr. and Mrs. Callahan have continued to add their imaginative improvements to this already solid and impressive structure. Three full floors and an attic make up the house which has 68 windows and eight fireplaces, all in working order.

About four years ago, the Callahan's completed work on a beautiful country kitchen and an adjoining Florida room with white wicker and blue accents. Visible from this spacious room is an octagonal Victorian-style gazebo just completed in the back yard. Numerous English boxwood plants, rooted by Mrs. Callahan over the years, give the yard evergreen beauty on the bleakest winter days.

Tour Book 1992:

Of numerous rectilinear houses of the American Foursquare plan along West Main Street, none are more distinctive than the pair of solid granite dwellings in the 200 block. These structures of hewn stone, a material rare in this city of brick and wood, stand out not only because of the exterior finish, but also on account of their singular history.

Fashioned by four Italians who pitched tents on West Main Street just before World War I, the houses at 243 and 247 West Main are constructed of granite hauled to Danville by train from Mt. Airy, North Carolina's granite capital in that state's northwest mountains. The work was commissioned by two brothers, Charles and Peter Booth. Today, Peter Booth's house is the gracious home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Callahan.

Like its near-twin next door, Peter Booth's old dwelling is framed by exterior walls two feet thick. Its Italian craftsmen, believed to have been in the area for construction projects at the textile mills in Schoolfield, erected the first wooden scaffold for the house in 1914 and methodically set in place each hand-cut stone, no two of which are alike, before the framework was removed two years later. Inside, the woodwork is beautifully finished birch.

Peter Booth sold his house to Mr. and Mrs. J.M. Thomas. Some 35 years ago Mr. Jackson Fowlkes, Mrs. Callahan's late husband, purchased it from the Thomas estate. Since his death and Mrs. Fowlkes remarriage to Edwin Callahan, the Callahans have made this already impressive structure ever more engaging with their loving improvements. The massive house boasts three full floors and an attic with a total of 68 windows and eight fireplaces, all in working order! The Callahans have filled every floor with beautiful examples of antique furniture. Cranberry glass, and enamelware in a stunning country kitchen -- are only two of their many handsome, eclectic collections of period pieces. Their love of gardening is evident in the lush English boxwood, rooted by Mrs. Callahan over the years, which line the front walk and grace the back yard. The rear garden also features a quaint octagonal Victorian-style gazebo visible from the Florida room which is furnished in white wicker.

Holiday visitors will be treated also to the Callahans' 16 Christmas trees, decorated with ornaments from the Danbury Mint series. The Callahan's collecting and decorating talents have not gone unnoticed beyond Danville; currently their house is being featured in two national magazines featuring the homes and design tastes of the Victorian and Edwardian eras.

Tour Book 2005:

In 1914, four Italians pitched tents on West Main Street and began constructing two Foursquare houses of granite from Mt. Airy, North Carolina. The work was commissioned by two brothers, Charles and Peter Booth. Peter Booth's former residence is open for today's tour.

The stones travelled to Danville by rail, and were hauled from the train to the building site by horse and wagon. Each stone in both houses is hand-dressed; no two are alike. Both dwellings reflect two years' work by Italian craftsmen who built a wood scaffold from which to lay up walls two feet thick.

Peter Booth sold his house in 1926 to Mr. J. M. Thomas and his wife Florence. In 1957, it was purchased at auction from the Thomas estate by Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Fowlkes. Now, nearly 50 years later, Ruth (Fowlkes) Callahan remains the caring steward and mistress of the house -- having lived here with her first husband, Mr. Fowlkes, until his untimely death in 1966, and through her long and happy marriage to Mr. Edwin "Bay" Callahan, who died last year.

Over the years, service areas like the butler's pantry and breakfast nook, were joined to create an open kitchen and sitting area for the four children reared here. Also, a former porch off the kitchen was enclosed to create an airy, blue-and-white Florida room, overlooking the backyard gazebo surrounded by azaleas and English boxwood.

Through the years, Mrs. Callahan and her family have filled the house with antiques and collections which reflect the dwelling's Edwardian-era origins. Each room on the first floor and its effects tells a story -- from North Carolina Governor Reid's dining room table to the player piano from the city's old Bijou Theatre, plus cranberry glass and enamelware, to mention only a few choice items. These furnishings, art objects and memorabilia are set off against birch woodwork throughout the house of 23 rooms, 68 windows and eight fireplaces.

Tour Book 1988:

Shingled gables with sawn and turned ornaments, bracketed cornices, and rich carving in the porch pediment are just some of the varied wood details that embellish the complex geometry of this important Queen Anne structure built in 1891-92. It not only occupies a conspicuous corner of West Main Street but also an important place in area history as the home of Andrew Jackson Montague. In 1885, "Jack" Montague, as he was sometimes called, chose Danville to launch his legal and political career. While he and his family lived in this house he ran, successfully, for Attorney General of Virginia; that position led him into the Governor's mansion five years later. After his term as Governor, Montague went on to become Dean of the Law School at the University of Richmond from 1906 to 1912. In 1913 he was elected to Congress, where he served until his death in 1927.

When the Montagues left Danville in 1898, they did not immediately sell their home -- not until 1904 did it become the property of Loula G. Reagan, who lived here some forty years. During World War II she converted the house to apartments. When it was sold in 1946 and for 20 years thereafter, the house was used as rental property. Since 1967 it has been used primarily as a single-family dwelling, first by Mr. and Mrs. James T. Gauldin, who lived here until several years ago -- during which time they completed much needed exterior restoration -- and most recently by Mr. Lewis Dumont. Mr. Dumont, who purchased the landmark Montague home only last summer, already is well underway in his plans to bring out its potential. Systematically he has been cleaning and polishing early electric brass fixtures, having stained glass repaired, and adding to the rooms his collection of handsome antique oak and other turn-of-the-century and period furniture.

Register 14 Nov 1989: The Danville Running and Fitness Club will hold its annual meeting ... at the home of Lewis and Mary Dumont, 249 W. Main St. ...

Tour Book 1992:

By now, a century after its completion, this structure has become a well-known local landmark. Not only does it occupy a conspicuous corner on West Main Street, where its fanciful late-Victorian architecture -- deemed excellent in Danville's 1971 architectural inventory -- invites closer study, the house also is the symbol of an era. Shingled gables with sawn and turned ornaments, bracketed cornices, and rich carving in the porch pediment are among the varied wood details that embellish the complex geometry of this Queen Anne style structure and attest to its importance architecturally. The meteoric rise to power of its first owner, Andrew Jackson Montague, signifies its place in history.

Following the War Between the States, Danville was a tobacco and textile boom town, a mecca for such men as the Dibrell brothers, who relocated here from Richmond; and the Schoolfield brothers who moved here from Horsepasture in Henry County. Respectively, they founded Dibrell Brothers, Inc., now a Fortune 500 company; and Dan River Inc., a world leader in textiles. Similarly, rather than return to his native King and Queen County following law school, young "Jack" Montague chose Danville to launch his legal career in 1885. While he and his family lived in this house he ran, successfully, in 1897 for Attorney General of Virginia. That position led him into the Governor's mansion five years later. After his term as the Commonwealth's first governor of the new century, Montague went on to become Dean of the Law School at the University of Richmond from 1906-12. In 1912 he was elected to Congress, where he served until his death in 1927.

When the Montagues left Danville in 1898, they did not sell their home immediately -- not until 1904 did it become the property of Loula G. Reagan, who lived here some 40 years. During the Second World War she converted the house to apartments. When it was sold in 1946 and for two decades thereafter, the house was used for rental property. After the structure was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. James T. Gauldin in 1967, work began to return it to single family use. Since 1988, that process has been completed by its present owners, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Dumont.

Their painstaking craftsmanship has returned the soft glow of the 1890s to its spacious rooms, upstairs and down. The Dumonts themselves have spent countless hours hand stripping oak wainscoting and other details, with dramatic and beautiful results, evident especially in the entry hall and stairway. They have been equally meticulous in securing appropriate lighting fixtures for the house. Even the baths sport period-appropriate antique sinks, tubs, and water closets; the kitchen is lined with glass-fronted cabinets popular at the turn of the century. Much of the original floor plan of the house is now restored, with rooms decorated not only with wallpaper, but also with rag-rolled paint. The owners, who are inveterate flea market, auction, and antique hunters, have filled these rooms with handsome pieces, especially unusual oak furnishings, appropriate for a household headed by a young professional in the 1890s, and eminently practical for their successors of the 1990s.

Over the past 17 years the Dumonts have refurbished the house inside and out -- systematically cleaning and polishing early-electric brass fixtures, seeing to the repair of jewel-toned stained glass, and enhancing the rooms with their extensive collection of handsome antique oak pieces, and other furniture and fittings appropriate to the period of the turn of the 20th century. Painted in a palette reminiscent of Victorian Cape May, New Jersey, the house remains a center of activity not only for the Dumonts but also for three active boys, who share their parents' enthusiasm for fitness and sports.
